Happy Feast Day to all!

There is an amusing story about a mother who gave a bottle of Coke to her older son. She told him to share it equally with his younger brother. Drinking straight from the bottle, the son emptied all its contents.

“Didn’t I tell you to share the bottle equally with your younger brother?” the mother fumed. “Why did you drink it all?” “Mama,” he replied, “I couldn’t help it because my share was at the bottom.”

Corpus Christi Sunday is about sharing and compassion. The Lord was “moved with pity” at the famished crowd doggedly following Him. Instead of sending them away, He performed a miracle of multiplying five loaves and two fishes in order to feed them.

Christ’s concept of compassion is not just feeling sorry for people, but a sensitivity that flows into action, a sentiment that seeks to “go out of the way.” The gospel message is clear: As Christ showed compassion so must we.

A second message of Corpus Christi conveys that the miracle of the loaves and fishes is seen not just to feed the hungry crowd but as a sign that pointed to a greater kind of food, the Eucharist. The Eucharist as taught by Christ was not merely a spiritual bread, but truly His body and blood.

And down through the centuries, it has become our spiritual food at Mass. The questions are: Have we appreciated enough this gift by receiving it at Holy Mass? Do we really believe Christ’s words: “He who eats My flesh and drinks My blood will have eternal life”?

May the feast of Corpus Christi remind us of the great gift of Christ’s Body and Blood and appreciate it by constantly receiving it at Mass.

God bless you,

Fr. Luis
