From the desk of the pastor...

Mankind has always valued and exalted the strong, the beautiful, the successful . . . The happiness of a person has usually been measured by the degree in which one achieves good results or arouses admiration. Conversely, the absence of strength, beauty, riches, success, and the like is considered a misfortune – a source of frustration, humiliation and suffering. Such has always been the prevailing scale of values in “the kingdom of man.”

When Jesus came, he challenged and rejected this earth-bound standard which condemns to hopelessness and frustration on the majority of mankind. With his “Sermon on the Mount,” he turned upside down this short-sighted value system and opposed to it the values of the “Kingdom of God,” the opening set of which is enshrined in “The Beatitudes.” The eight Beatitudes contain a message of hope for all the afflicted. They are an invitation addressed to all to gaze beyond the dim horizon of human limitations, injustices, tragedies.

The Beatitudes have exerted a unique fascination on many, including many who do not belong to the Christian denominations. They strike the readers of today just as they must have thrilled Jesus’ listeners when he proclaimed them for the first time.

And yet, there is the danger that we take them for granted. The sound is pleasing to the ear, but their message may fail to move our wills. They do not seem to affect our attitudes and our lives. But this was not so for the first Christians, as well as for the Saints of all centuries. For them, these eight simple pronouncements of Our Lord were a source of continuous inspiration and a challenge in their lives. The Beatitudes were to them what soil, rain and sunlight are to a tree. Rooted in them and imbibed with their spirit, the Saints produced fruits of humility, mercy, purity, commitment, justice, fidelity, endurance and hope. The Beatitudes have been for the Saints of all ages a WAY OF LIFE.

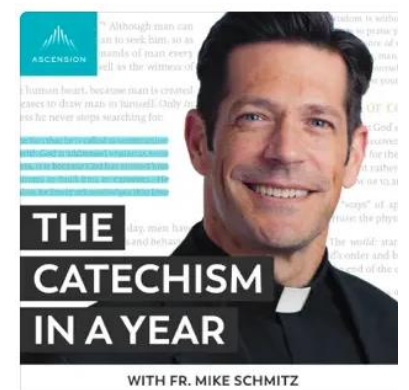

- Fr Luis

Food Bank: The need is very real and our client base continues to grow as we foresee a challenging winter ahead. While we will not be able to have Church collections for the next little while, there are collection boxes at both our grocery stores and a small donation when grocery shopping would go a long way. The Food Bank is also open from 9:30 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. on Wednesday and volunteers would be happy to accept any donations. The Food Bank is on the ground floor of the Lions Hall on Main Street. Prayer is powerful and always welcome!
